SELLING OFF!

UNEXPECTED NEWS.

"BAIL GAMMON."

SAMUEL DAVIS, of the Australian Store, Goulburn, has much pleasure in returning his sincere thanks to his numerous friends and extensive connexion, for the unprecedented patronage he has received for so many years, and which he is happy to say has been so appreciated that all parties he is sure are and have been satisfied with his mode of conducting his business.

S. D. having now (he is proud to say) succeeded in opening a correspondence with some of the first houses in London, Manchester, Sheffield, and Liverpool, by which means he will be receiving regular monthly supplies from those well distinguished manufacturing towns at a price that must prove of vital importance to the rising town of Goulburn, and to, he may say, the most flourishing district in the colony.

S. D. will have (to fully carry out his intentions) to sell off his stock, which for extent and variety is too well known to need any comment, at a price that will prove truly astounding; for cash he must have; and is certain the sacrifice will be ultimately beneficial not only to him, but to all that he may have the honour of supplying with all direct importations.

S. D. now begs to impress on the minds of the inhabitants of Goulburn, settlers, storekeepers, &c., of Argyle, and the various other districts, that the whole of his present extensive stock will and must be sold by the end of this year, at considerably less than Sydney prices, for cash only, and what may remain after that will be sold off by auction, without any reserve.

SOONER VISITS ARE MADE TO THE ABOVE THE BETTER.

SAMUEL DAVIS,
Australian Store,
Goulburn.

In thus tendering his services for a share of the large and increasing commercial transactions of this portion of New South Wales, Mr. Campbell would beg to state that in addition to connexions and references of the highest respectability, he now enters upon his duties with the experience acquired during a residence of twenty-four years in the colony, and an unremitted attention during all that interval to the various important interests with which he now proposes to connect himself in this district.

E. FORD,

6787 Kent-street North.

JAMES MAGUIRE, in acquainting his friends and the public that he has taken the above-mentioned General Grocery and Provision Store, hopes that by a close attention to business, and by keeping articles of the very best quality always on hand, he will receive that liberal support bestowed upon his predecessor; suffice it to say, his greatest ambition will be to gain the good opinion of his patrons by conducting his business on a respectable, even-handed, and sound system, always observing an anxious desire to please by attention and civility, and selling goods at such prices that cannot fail to give universal satisfaction.

In addition to the stock the undersigned purchased from Mr. Ford, he has received a fresh supply of every article in the grocery line.

JAMES MAGUIRE,
Kent-street North.

6718 Near the Gas Works.

THESE are to certify that we, the undersigned masters of ships, now lying in the harbour of Port Jackson, did this day, at the request of Mr. S. Elliott, select from the stock in his store, for the purpose of trying their quality, one tin of each of the following descriptions of preserved fresh provisions, said to be of his manufacture, viz.:—

Beef and vegetables
Mutton and vegetables
Lamb and green peas
Ox-tail soup

And having amply tested the same, do pronounce them to be fully equal to any article of the kind that has come under our notice. We, therefore, with confidence recommend them to shipmasters or other persons requiring this description of stores.

A tin of beef suet was also opened, and found to be fresh and sweet.

Dated at Sydney, this 25th day of October, A.D. 1847.

Departure.—September 23. Sansparcille, schooner, for the Mauritius. Cargo—1000 bushels and 320 bags wheat, 447 bags flour, 159 bags bran, &c.

Private letters from the Mauritius state that the brig Appleton, hence for London, touched there for water on the 3rd July, and sailed again on the 4th; Captain Sturt and family all well. The Mazeppa had sold the whole of her cargo from this port, and sailed on the 5th July for Penang and Singapore, to load for Adelaide.—South Australian, September 21.

The Iris reports that the barque Woodlark would sail from Manila for Port Phillip and Sydney about the 10th August; and the Bermondsay, for Sydney direct, about the 16th August. The brig Nelson arrived at Manila from Auckland on the 1st, and the barque Auriga from Hobart Town on the 20th July. The barque Kinnear sailed for Cork on the 28th July; and the Castle Eden and Fairlie were loading for England when the Iris sailed. Freights were as high as £6 10s. to £7 per ton. On the 1st instant, the Iris spoke the American ship Hibernia, of New Bedford, fourteen months out, with 500 barrels sperm oil.

The John Pirie brings but little news from Hobart Town, and has not spoken any vessel on the passage up. The brig Emma, Pockley, was to sail for Launceston on the 19th instant, to load with wheat, &c., for this port. The cargo of the Jane Francis, which had arrived at Hobart Town from London, consisted principally of Government stores.

The Shamrock arrived alongside the wharf yesterday evening about six o'clock, having completed the run from Port Phillip Heads in sixty-six hours, including her detention at Twofold Bay. She conveyed from Launceston to Melbourne this trip eighteen cabin and one hundred steerage passengers, and had also on board twenty-five horses. We learn that the report brought by the Vixen, from Twofold Bay, about ten days since, respecting some of her screws having loosened on her passage down, was totally unfounded. The brig Emma, Osborne, hence the 7th instant, arrived at Launceston on the 18th, and the City of Sydney, hence the 13th instant, on the following day. The barque Agostina, from London the 30th June, was going up the river as the Shamrock sailed from Launceston, and intelligence had just been received from Hobart Town of the arrival of the Calcutta at that port, from London the 1st July. The brig John Souchea, in consequence of getting on shore, had been compelled to disharge the whole of her cargo at Launceston. The schooner Thomas Lord was advertised to sail from the latter port for Sydney on the 21st instant; the brig William would also sail about the same time, and the City of Sydney on Saturday last. The schooner Munford was loading for the Mauritius, for which port she was advertised to sail on the 20th instant. The North Pole, from Liverpool the 27th May, and the Nelson, from Leith, via Adelaide, arrived at Port Phillip on Friday last. The barque Speed, and schooner Phœbe, were to sail from the latter port for Sydney on Sunday last, and the brig Christina yesterday. The Hashemy was to sail for Madras this day (Wednesday), and would probably call at this port on her way. Captain Gilmore reports having passed the schooner Shamrock, from Circular Head, bound for this port, off Wollongong, at 11 A.M., yesterday.

Boyd Town.—The steamer Juno, hence, arrived at Boyd Town on Saturday morning last, and sailed again for Port Phillip at 9 A.M. the following day. The schooner Lady Mary Fitz Roy sailed for Pampula and Sydney on Thursday last, also the Hobart Town barque Frances, and brigs Grecian and Maguasha, for the Whaling Grounds. We have a Boyd Town Shipping List before us, but excepting the above, it contains nothing more than was published in yesterday's Herald.

The schooner Mary Ann, hence the 27th ultimo, arrived at Portland Bay on the 17th instant.

In consequence of some slight repairs being required by the steamer Tamar, her departure for Moreton Bay has been postponed until to-morrow evening, at eight.

By Adelaide papers received yesterday, via Port Phillip, we perceive the schooner Empress had been taken off the berth for Sydney, and laid on for the Mauritius.

COLONIAL STATISTICS.

No. V.—Money and Population.

The amount of Coin in the colony, in each of the last ten years, with its ratio to the population, and also the mean of each five years, were as follows:—

	Coin.	Per Head of Population. £ s. d.
1837	£427,400	5 0 2
1838	520,100	5 6 8
1839	516,100	4 10 2
1840	397,600	3 1 4
1841	462,600	3 1 9
1842	475,400	2 19 7
1843	424,000	2 11 2
1844	559,900	3 4 7
1845	855,200	4 14 2
1846	827,300	4 4 1
Mean of the first 5 years	464,800	4 0 7
Mean of the last 5 years	628,400	3 7 0

In the amount of Coin, the mean of the last five years shows an increase on that of the first of £163,600, or at the rate of more than 35 per cent.; while in the same period the mean population had increased by 60,000 souls, or at the rate of 52 per cent.

It will be observed that the quantity of Coin was less in 1846 than in the previous year by £27,900. This decrease was caused entirely by operations in the Banks, as the following statement will show:—

In the Banks, 1845		£780,900
1846		681,100
	Decrease	£ 99,800
In Colonial Treasury and Military Chest 1845	£ 74,300
1846	146,200
	Increase	71,900
	Net decrease	£27,900

The amount of Bank Notes in circulation in each of the last five years, with its ratio to the population, was as follows:—

	Bank Notes.	Per Head. £ s. d.
1842	£192,500	1 4 1
1843	159,900	0 19 4
1844	151,500	0 17 6
1845	180,100	0 19 10
1846	208,500	1 1 2
Mean of the 5 years	178,500	1 0 4

The amount of Bank Notes in circulation in England, including those of the National and the Private and Joint Stock Banks, at the time of the last Census, averaged £1 15s. 10d. per head of the population, being in the proportion of about 7 to 4 of the average in this country during the last five years.

The ratio of our Bank Notes in circulation to the amount of Coin was as follows:—

	Bank Notes. £ s.
1842	40 10	to £100 of coin.
1843	37 14
1844	27 1
1845	21 1
1846	25 4
Mean of the 5 years	28 8

In the amounts of Coin upon which these ratios are computed, the sums lodged in the Treasury and Military Chest are included. It would be more correct, perhaps, to restrict the comparison to the Coin lodged in the Banks. The mean amount of the five years gives for the Coin in the Banks £575,000, which, compared with the mean amount of Bank Notes in circulation in that period, £178,500, shows a mean ratio of rather more than £31 to £100.

The fluctuations in the aggregate amounts of Coin in the colony during the last ten years have been as follows:—

				per cent.
Increase of—
1837 upon	1836	....	£ 6,700	= 1·6
1838 ,,	1837	....	92,700	= 21·7
1841 ,,	1840	....	65,000	= 16·3
1842 ,,	1841	....	12,800	= 2·8

COUNCIL PAPER.

REPORT FROM THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE LIBRARY OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.

The Committee have deemed it their duty at the conclusion of this—probably the last Session of the present Council, to place on record a statement of their proceedings. The detail which they have to present is brief, and simply comprises a statement of the number of volumes now in the Library,—a narrative of the steps they have taken for the purchase of books,—and an account of the money still remaining unexpended in the hands of the Colonial Treasurer, and available for this particular service.

In consequence of the difficulty and delay attendant upon the execution of orders transmitted through the Colonial Agent, the Committee have deemed it advisable (with the sanction of the Colonial Secretary,) to adopt a system similar to that pursued by the Committee of the Australian Subscription Library, who for several years past, have received their supplies of books from Mr. Richardson, of Cornhill. It having been found that Mr. Richardson's promptitude in the execution of orders, and the reasonable rate of his charges, were such as to afford satisfaction, your Committee forwarded in November last, an order to Mr. Richardson.

This order comprises one hundred and one works, and includes standard books in Constitutional and Parliamentary History—the law and practice of Parliament — the law of Nations—Statistics — Political Economy — History — Biography — Geography — and general literature. The Committee have received (through the Speaker,) intimation of the order having reached England, and they have reason to expect that within the course of a few weeks, the books here referred to, will be on the shelves of the Library.

At the time the Committee took charge of the Library, the number of volumes contained in it amounted to		337
Since then, the Committee have added by purchase in the colony	532
And from England	170
	702
And there have been added by donations from the Home and Colonial Governments, and private individuals	274
		976
Making the total number of volumes at present in the Library—exclusive of three hundred and eleven unbound Parliamentary Papers		1,313
And the number of volumes in the unexecuted order to Mr. Richardson above referred to, will amount to about		850

The addition that will shortly be made to the collection of volumes in the Library, will be such as to require extended accommodation. In consequence of additional room being required for the clerks employed under Mr. Macpherson, an arrangement has been suggested for transferring the shelves from the room where they are at present placed to the Committee Room on the right of the Council Chamber. The plan will have the advantage of affording the accommodation required by the clerks, and will render the books more accessible to the members of your honorable House than they are at present. The arrangement here referred to will however be of a temporary character, as the accumulation of books will, at no distant period, be such as to require a more capacious apartment for their reception, than any that can be afforded in the present suite of buildings appropriated to the Council.

In pursuance of the vote of the Council of three hundred pounds, in aid of the Library for the year 1848, the Committee have prepared a list, for transmission to England, of such books as the peculiar object and character of the Library seem to render suitable.

Your Committee have appended to this Report, a statement of the sums voted annually for the purchase of books—the amount expended - and the balance still available for the objects of the Library.

SUPREME COURT.

Tuesday.

Before the full Court.

RODD v. RAPER.

This was an action of assumpsit; amongst other counts in the declaration there was a special count, setting out a contract alleging that the defendant bought of the plaintiff a certain number of cattle at 45s. per head, but when offered for delivery he refused to take them. To this the defendant pleaded, amongst other pleas, a plea of fraud, to the effect that he was induced to buy the cattle upon being fraudently informed that they were fat, and of the plaintiff's breed; upon this issue was joined. At the trial in August last, it appeared that the plaintiff employed Mr. Mort, as his agent, in Sydney, to dispose of these cattle, writing to him that they would average in weight about 600 lbs. each; this letter was shown to the defendant, and shortly after they were sold to him at 45s. per head; and as the sale note described, "they were bought with all faults, and as they were." When they arrived near Sydney, and upon the defendant seeing them, he refused to take them. Mr. Mort upon giving due notice, resold them by public auction at 35s. 6d. per head; and this action was brought to recover the difference in amount between the first and second sale, together with the expenses incurred in consequence of the latter. His Honor Mr. Justice Dickinson in directing the Jury, told them, that before they could find for the defendant on the plea of fraud, they must be satisfied that a misrepresentation was made both as to the breed, and as to the fatness. The Jury, however, found for the plaintiff on the other issues, and on the plea of fraud found the following facts, viz.—that a misrepresentation had been made as to their fatness, but not as to their breed; that they were not fat cattle; and that the fatness was the inducement to enter into the contract, upon this issue also it was agreed, that the Jury should find a verdict for the plaintiff, with liberty reserved to the Court to enter it for the defendant, if the Court should be of opinion that legally the plea of fraud had been made out. The Court was now moved accordingly,—and in addition to the motion, pointed to the special facts, it was attempted by notice to move, on other grounds, for a new trial; but the Court seemed inclined, at any rate in the first instance, to confine the defendant to show that the plea of fraud had been proved.

Messrs. Fisher and Broadhurst, for the defendant, contended that, supposing the plea of fraud had not been satisfactorily made out, then as the Jury have found on that issue for the plaintiff, and, moreover, on the same issue, certain facts—which might be for the purpose of the argument, admitted to amount to a variance; and being a variance, the Judge who tried the cause, not having amended the record, the Court therefore was invited, notwithstanding that the Jury had found a verdict for the plaintiff on the issue, to give judgment according to the very right and justice of the case, being empowered thereto in the like case, by the 38th section of the 5 Victoria, No. 9. It being apparent that the variance was immaterial to the merits of the case, and such that could not have prejudiced the plaintiff in the conduct of the action. For the very right and justice of the case was with the defendant—he had been induced to buy cattle upon a fraudulent misrepresentation, that they were fat,—and the Jury found they were not fat; and this fraud would relieve him of his contract. The following cases were cited:—Guest v. Elwes, 5 A. and E., 118; Mash v. Denham, 1 Moo. and Rob., 442; Schneider v. Heath, 3 Q. B.; and Fuller v. Wilson, 3 Camp., 505.

Messrs. Michie and Lowe appeared in support of the verdict on the issue on the plea of fraud; and by whom it was contended that the state of facts found by the Jury would not alone warrant the Court now to set aside that verdict; for even the very wide and extended meaning endeavoured to be given to the words of the statute, viz., the very right and equity of the case, would not assist the defendant: for the Court to do what is now asked of them to do, the Court must presume that which is not found, viz.—that the plaintiff was guilty of fraud in making the representation. A test to discover whether the Court could thus equitably interfere upon the very facts found, would be to turn these very facts into a technical form in the shape of a plea; and being thus put into a plea, it would be asked whether such a plea would be good upon demurrer; it was submitted that such a plea would be no answer to the action. Again, another argument was used, viz., whether supposing by striking out in the plea of fraud, the words "false and fraudulently," would the plea be good also on demurrer. The following cases were cited:—Foster v. Charles, 7 Bing. 105; Hales v. Milward, 8 Taunt; Fling v. Tobin, M. and Malk. 367; Fuller v. Wilson, 3 Q. B., 58; Collins v. Evans, 13 L. J., 2. B. 180; Omerod v. Huth, 14 L. J.; and Barley v. Water, 15 L. J., 2 B., 369.

Mr. Fisher was heard in reply, and upon Messrs. Michie and Lowe being called upon to argue the point, whether the Court should not entertain also the motion for a new trial, some argument ensued, and eventually

His Honor the Chief Justice, in delivering judgment, said, that he and Mr. Justice Therry agreed, that in justice to the Jury, that the case ought to be sent down again to a Jury; and whichever way the Court decided, the decision was open to some difficulties. The Jury, in the way in which they had found the facts, had not found enough for the Court to have jurisdiction in the matter, they had omitted to find one most material and essential fact, viz.,—whether the contract was entered into through a false and fraudulent representation made by the plaintiff. His Honor further intimated, that he was of opinion that the plea of fraud would be no answer to the action, unless it could be shown by evidence that the representation as to the fatness, was false to the knowledge of the plaintiff, on the authority of a case reported in 8 Car. and P. 532. The case would therefore be sent down for a new trial, without hearing the motion for a new trial.

His Honor Mr. Justice Dickinson agreed with the rest of the Court, that the Court could not now, upon the finding of the facts, give judgment according to the very right and justice of the case for the reason above assigned; and that that finding ought to be treated as a nullity; but still it was open to the defendant to move for a new trial in the ordinary way, and in the way proposed, on the ground of misdirection; and provided that the Court should be of opinion that there had been a misdirection, then of course a new trial would be granted; and under these circumstances only ought the case to be sent back to a jury.

Clause 31 enacts, that all complaints under this Act shall be made within six months of the commission of the offence. Clause 32 enacts, that all persons refusing to appear on summons to attend as witnesses, in any matter under this Act, their reasonable expenses having been tendered them, shall be liable to a penalty of £5. Clause 33 enacts, that no warrant of commitment or conviction, shall be voided by want of form, or the latter be removed by certiorari or otherwise, into any of the superior courts. Clause 34 enacts, that a defendant may appeal against a conviction to the nearest Court of Quarter Sessions within four months of the adjudication, and on giving ten days' notice in writing to the party appealed against, stating the nature and grounds of the appeal. Clause 35 enacts, that the Court of Quarter Sessions may hear and determine appeals in a summary way, or adjourn them, and upon the hearing may mitigate any penalty or forfeiture. or confirm or quash any adjudication, and order any money paid by the appellant, or levied on his goods, to be returned to him, and order such further satisfaction to be made to him as they may judge reasonable. Clause 36 enacts, that H.M. ships of war shall be exempted from this Act, and all vessels not having a colonial or British register. Thursday, 21.—Forenoon calm and pleasant; bright hazy atmosphere; at noon north wind arose and blew fresh till after sunset, then darkly clouded; lightning in the north-east, a few drops of rain; at 8·30 southerly wind arose strong and squally, but moderated before eleven o'clock.

Friday, 22.—Early part calm, cloudy overhead, clear horizon; after nine light airs from north-west, but close and sultry all middle part and afternoon; calm till sunset, when clouded heavily over from southward, and began to blow fresh and gusty from south-and-by-east; some brief showers in the night.

DIED.

At Williams Town, on the morning of Sunday, the 17th instant, after a short but severe illness, Mr. David Goodsir, First Landing Waiter and Tide Surveyor of the Port of Melbourne, and Surveyor for Lloyd's.

At the Sydney Glebe, on the morning of the 26th instant, Frank, infant son of E. H. Pollard, aged eight months.

On the 22nd instant, at Broughtonsworth, Burroowa, Emma Rebecca, the second daughter of Mr. William Henry Broughton, after an illness of seven days, aged 14 years.

At Hobart Town, on the 13th instant, John Robert, infant son of Mr. J. R. Morris, aged fourteen months.

CHORAL SOCIETY.—We are requested to state that in consequence of the illness of several of the members of the Choral Society, the visitors' night has been postponed until further notice.

THE SIGNAL MASTER'S HOUSE.—We have often had occasion to compliment the Colonial Architect upon the rapid progress which is made in public buildings under his management, and we are glad to have another instance to communicate. Just twelve months since the Legislative Council voted £200 for the erection of a house for the signal master at Port Phillip; the amount shows the tremendous extent of work which is to be performed, and yet it will hardly be believed that, with even more than his accustomed speed, the Colonial Architect has proceeded so far with the work that a sheet of paper on which to make a plan has been procured from the storekeeper. Such diligence must not be lost sight of, and we intend to keep our readers acquainted with the further progress of this important undertaking, in order that the merits of this hardworking establishment may be duly appreciated.

THE INFLUENZA.—Some idea of the extent to which this troublesome epidemic prevails, may be formed from the fact that in one school in Sydney, where the average attendance of children for some months has been two hundred and fifty, there was last week only an average of sixty; and that in another school of three hundred only eighty were present.

SYDNEY COLLEGE.—With a desire of attaching some degree of interest to the important object of the meeting to be held at three, this day, at the above Institution, a correspondent has forwarded to us for insertion, a letter written by Pliny, the younger, to the historian Tacitus, on the subject of education at Milan, its date is about 1700 years ago: vide Melmoth's Translation of Pliny's letters, No. 13. A perusal of it must present to the mind of every reader conversant with the unsatisfactory state of public school or collegiate education in Australia, the remarkable parallel which subsists between the circumstances of Sydney and Milan in this respect: while to the force and truth of the sentiments of Pliny, as to the education of children abroad, several families in this colony can give their decided testimony. "I rejoice that you are safely arrived in Rome; for though I am always desirous to see you, I am more particularly so now. I purpose to continue a few days longer at my house at Tusculum, in order to finish a work which I have upon my hands. For I am afraid, should I put a stop to this design now that it is so nearly completed, I shall find it difficult to resume it. In the mean while, that I may lose no time, I send this letter before me to request a favour of you, which I hope shortly to ask in person. But before I inform you what my request is, I must let you into the occasion of it. Being lately at Comum, the place of my nativity, a young lad, son to one of my neighbours, made me a visit. I asked him whether he studied oratory, and where?—he told me he did, and at Mediolanum. (Milan.) And why not here? Because (said his father, who came with him) we have no professors. 'No! (said I), surely it nearly concerns you who are fathers (and very opportunely several of the company were so) that your sons should receive their education here, rather than any where else. For where can they be placed more agreeable than in their own country, or instructed with more safety and less expense than at home under the eye of their parents? Upon what very easy terms might you, by a general contribution, procure proper masters, if you would only apply, towards the raising a salary for them, the extraordinary expense it costs you for your sons journies, lodgings, and whatever else you pay for upon account of their being abroad; as pay indeed you must in such a case for every thing. Though I have no children myself, yet I shall willingly contribute to a design so beneficial to (what I look upon as a child or a parent) my country; and therefore I will advance a third part of any sum you shall think proper to raise for this purpose. I would take upon myself the whole expense, were I not apprehensive that my benefaction might hereafter be abused and perverted to private ends; as I have observed to be the case in several places where public foundations of this nature have been established. The single means to prevent this mischief is, to leave the choice of the professors entirely in the breasts of the parents, who will be so much the more careful to determine properly, as they shall be obliged to share the expense of maintaining them. For though they might be careless in disposing of another's bounty, they will certainly be cautious how they apply their own; and will see that none but those who deserve it shall receive my money, when they must at the same time receive theirs too. Let my example, then, encourage you to unite heartily in this useful design; and be assured the greater the sum my share shall amount to, the more agreeable it will be to me. You can undertake nothing that will be more advantageous to your children, nor more acceptable to your country. They will by this means receive their education where they received their birth, and be accustomed from their infancy to inhabit and affect their native soil. May you be able to procure professors of such distinguished abilities, that the neighbouring towns shall be glad to draw their learning from hence; and as you now send your children to foreigners for education, may foreigners in their turn flock hither for their instruction!' I thought proper thus to lay open to you the rise of this affair, that you might be the more sensible how agreeable it will be to me, if you undertake the office I request. I entreat you, therefore, with all the earnestness a matter of so much importance deserves, to look out amongst the great numbers of men of letters which the reputation of your genius brings to you, proper persons to whom we may apply for this purpose; but without entering into any agreement with them on my part. For I would leave it entirely free to the parents to judge and choose as they shall see proper; all the share I pretend to claim is, that of contributing my care and my money. If, therefore, any one shall be found who thinks himself qualified for the undertaking, he may repair thither; but without relying upon anything but his merit.—Farewell."

PHILLIP WARD. — The following notice appears in yesterday's Government Gazette:—"Town Clerk's Office, Sydney, 22nd October, 1847. Notice is hereby given, that on the 18th instant, Mr. James Oatley was duly elected assessor for Phillip Ward, in the room of Mr. Lewis Moore, resigned. By order of the Right Worshipful the Mayor.—JOHN RAE, Town Clerk."

ELECTORAL LISTS.—His Excellency the Governor has directed it to be notified, that he has appointed the following gentlemen to assist in revising the electoral lists, under the Act of Council 6th Victoria, No. 16, viz.:—BOURKE.—Messrs. Thomas Brown Dymock, Francis Flanagan, Jun., and George Henry Tapping.

ROBBERY.—Some time on Friday last property to the amount of about £50 was stolen from the residence of Dr. Mallon, Elizabeth-street North. It consisted of a work box, a lady's gold watch and chain, a quantity of lady's jewellery, and a Catholic prayer book. No clue has yet been ascertained to the thief.

BOOK STEALING.—Passing along George-street on Saturday evening, Mr. James Cunningham observed in the book stall of Mr. Cook, near the Cathedral, some books which had some time since been stolen from him. He claimed them as his, when Cook said that they, with some others, were purchased by him from a person who gave his name as Thompson, and showed a receipt for the purchase money, signed Henry Thompson, and the writing of which corresponded with the writing of the name in the books. On Monday morning Mrs. Cook took to Mr. Cunningham the rest of the books purchased at the same time with those he had claimed, which also he (Mr. C.) identified as having missed from his premises about ten days ago. Mr. and Mrs. Cook were given into custody, and yesterday they appeared at the Police Office. Mrs. Cook was discharged, and her husband remanded for fourteen days to give an opportunity of discovering the person of whom he purchased the books. He was admitted to bail in his own recognizances to appear in a fortnight.

PERJURY.—Yesterday, a man named Lockie was committed by the Police Bench to take his trial for wilful and corrupt perjury, in having, on the 18th instant, swore that on the morning of the 8th instant he saw one Daniel Carney pull up a quantity of green oats, value 1s., the property of him, Lockie, which the said Carney then stole and carried away. Carney now adduced evidence of the impossibility of his having been there at all, on which Lockie was committed to take his trial.

IMMIGRATION.—This question was brought before the meeting of the Town Council held on Thursday, and the discussion ended by the adoption of the following resolutions:—"Deeply alive to the pressing want of labour throughout the district, and particularly in the town of Melbourne, foreseeing the necessity of prompt and energetic measures to obtain a supply of labour from the mother country—and by that means prevent the further introduction of coolie and cannibal labourers, which by their amalgamation with our British colonists would detract from our social position—this Council coincides with the resolution of the Legislative Council arrived at, on the 21st ultimo, in regard to the revival of immigration. 2nd. This Council concurring generally in the said resolution, trusts, nevertheless, that the territorial revenue of the province will be kept distinct from that of the Middle District, and applied towards importing labour into Port Phillip alone; and it would impress upon the government the propriety of giving Port Phillip the full benefit of her land fund as an act of justice, and because labour is at least twenty-five per cent. higher in this than the northern district of the colony, as appears from the evidence of Mr. Merewether, the Immigration Agent, before the Select Committee of the Legislative Council on Immigration. 3rd. That his Worship the Mayor be requested to write to his Honor the Superintendent, transmitting a copy of the above resolution, asking him to forward it to his Excellency the Governor, with a request that he will be pleased to forward it to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State along with the other Immigration documents, for the information of her Majesty's government.—Port Phillip Herald.

HOBART TOWN MARKETS, OCTOBER 15.—The best white wheat is firm at 5s. per bushel, with a tendency upwards. Whatever trifling sales may have been effected below this quotation, was either for white, affected with smut, or for red, which always rules at a reduction of from 2d. to 3d. per bushel. The quantity of red grown in the colony is, however, but trifling, and cannot affect the general market. Best flour, £12 per ton; best bread, 3d. per 2 lb. loaf; brown bread, 2½d.

Mr. Charles Newton has requested us to direct the attention of the trade and buyers in general, to his sale of choice summer drapery, which takes place this day, at his rooms. For particulars see advertisement.—Communicated.

We are requested by Mr. Stubbs to call the attention of our readers to Mr. Stubbs' sale, this day, at the Mart, at twelve o'clock precisely, of an allotment in New George-street, 30 acre farm at Newtown, 4 acres at Bondi, 30 acres at Cook's River, and several allotments of the village of Canterbury, to be sold to the highest bidder.—Communicated.

Mr. Stubbs particularly requests us to refer our readers to his advertisement of this day, for the sale of Elgin Cottage, Balmain. Those who delight in the freedom of the country, the beauties of Balmain, and the luxury of sea bathing, will no doubt endeavour to become possessed of this unique property.—Communicated.

NEWS FROM THE INTERIOR.

(From our Correspondents.)

LOWER MURRUMBIDGEE.

OCTOBER 22.—The weather since the date of my last has been very sultry, but has at length broken up, and a gentle penetrating rain is now falling. Although this will be most beneficial to the crops and pasture, it is nevertheless viewed with moody countenances by all interested in shearing operations, which are of course temporarily suspended.

The new Land Orders have set all here on the alert to fix their respective boundary lines, and before leases are granted Commissioners will have some sharp work to decide numerous disputed matters of this kind, particularly in the Murrumbidgee district, where the right of possession to an immense number of stations has remained undecided for years. A petition has been forwarded to the Governor by the Bench of Magistrates at Warga Warga, praying for a reservation of land for agricultural purposes, (according to the new regulations), in the neighbourhood of Warga Warga, where the soil is admirably adapted to the growth of every description of grain, and is for the most part an extensive plain, without a tree or shrub to intercept the ploughshare. The petition also prays for the establishment of a village at Warga Warga. We are disposed to think the Governor will accede to the prayer of the petition, more particularly as it has been clearly shown to His Excellency that below Warga Warga the soil of both banks of the Murrumbidgee suddenly alters its character, and becomes for the most part, wholly unfit for agricultural operations; and that as there has been no reservation of land for such purpose, either in the Lachlan or Murrumbidgee districts, the stockholders of these districts must, in the event of a scarcity of wheat, send a ruinous distance for a supply of flour. Should his Excellency assent to the petition, numerous allotments will be bought immediately, for I am aware several mechanics have already applied to the bench for permission to build and carry on their respective occupations at "Warga Warga," which of course cannot be allowed under the present state of things. One party in this neighbourhood has been authorised to purchase eight allotments forthwith, should the government decide on establishing the village. In order to disperse the obscurity which exists as to the locality of "Warga Warga," I may observe that it is situate on the south bank of the Murrumbidgee River, at about fifty miles below Gundagai, is but a short distance from the Melbourne road, and on the direct thoroughfare to Adelaide. On a future occasion I will give you a more detailed description of the place, with its surrounding country.

I am informed by a gentleman that has lately come up the river, that the caterpillars are cutting down the pasture in a frightful manner at a short distance from this, and that they are progressing in an easterly direction, so that we may expect them with us. Contrary to their usual custom, they are devastating the country at a distance from the river, leaving the flats on its immediate banks untouched. The grub itself also appears, from the account given of it, to be a different variety to that which generally presents itself on these dreadful visitations, and is covered with hair or down.

I have to report two other casualties since my last. The first, in which a servant of George M'Leay, Esq., of Buramballs, met his death by drowning; and the second, a case of sudden death with a servant of Mr. Joseph Andrew, of Kimo, the man being found dead beside his watch-fire in the morning; he was very old, and had been exceedingly dissipated. I am not aware to what cause his death is immediately attributed.

It appears from your journal last received here, that Mr. Boyd has been conferring a few "savage" obligations on you good folks of the counties, and it is rather odd that at the same time some of his interesting specimens of humanity, to the number of sixteen or twenty, were startling us of the "far west" from our propriety. It appears that the whole of this gentleman's importation of anthropophagi, who were located at a station called the Woolshed, took it into their heads to play truant, and decamped en masse for the city. This is the same amusing body of men your Seymour correspondent adverts to. They struck the Melbourne road, and last Friday came down on the Murrumbidgee in a body, en route to Sydney. They are described as being almost in a state of nudity, having for the most part no better covering than a baize shirt which reached only to the navel, and in some cases a cincture round the loins; some of them had fire-arms. They called at the different stations in their track, and begged provisions, which it is needless to say was invariably given. They committed no violence, however, that I have heard of. Several persons saw, and endeavoured to enter into conversation with them, but all that could be got out of them was "Missa Boyd—Missa Boyd"—accompanied by significant gestures towards their hypogastric region, as though there existed some strong analogy between Mr. Boyd and their bellies. One of Mr. Boyd's agents accompanied, endeavouring to persuade them to return, but without effect; and it was his intention to get them, (by stratagem, if possible), across to Twofold Bay; for, said he, "Mr. Boyd would not for any money they should get to Sydney." He applied to the magistracy as he passed along to interfere and stop them; but this of course was beyond their jurisdiction. No doubt you will shortly have the gratification of inspecting this "fine body of men" in Sydney, as they are resolutely bent on going there and obtaining a passage home, "where'er that ill-starred home may be."

GOULBURN.

OCTOBER 23.—THE WEATHER.—From time to time the heavens have been covered with blackness, and every indication of a copious supply of rain has made its appearance, but our fond hopes have been disappointed. As may be expected the crops are of stinted growth, the ear has begun to form while the blade is scarcely above the ground. Present prospects in this immediate neighbourhood are anything but cheering. Atmospheric changes from heat to cold have been very great for a short time; yesterday a few drops of rain fell from a passing cloud. The air this evening has been very chill, an easterly wind with a haze, and an appearance of rain came on about sundown, but speedily disappeared. If rain does not fall soon there will be a failure with us. Rain is also much wanted to clean out the water-holes, especially those used for sheep-washing. Preparations are making for carrying on this important branch of colonial industry. We do not remember so great a want of rain as there is at the present time for years.

BOYD'S BLACKS.—About twenty-five of these miserable looking creatures passed through this township this afternoon, en route for Sydney: we believe some gentleman connected with Mr. Boyd has also passed through Goulburn, in company with the cook who assisted to procure them, both of whom endeavoured to get them to return to the Murray, from which they have made their exit; but being true patriots, their endeavours were futile; the paramount love of Tanna would not allow them to turn their face to Missa Boyd; nothing would stop them from going to Sinna, where they expect to get a ship to take them to Tanna, with the same facility as that which brought them hither. Whilst on their way we believe they are dependant on the casual supplies they can get; some of them are almost in a state of nudity; at the time we saw them, they were nearly all shivering from the cold, some scarcely able to walk. Captain Edenborough generously supplied them at his place with provisions, and the gentleman in the management of Mr Bradley's establishment here gave them supplies for their immediate wants. Some of them are fine looking men, of intelligent countenance, but we apprehend the expense of breaking in the best of them would exceed their profit; a more hopeless endeavour to relieve the deficiency of labour could hardly have been conceived or adopted by persons possessed of their reason. It is to be hoped that the present failure of what was conceived by some to be an excellent expedient, will deter others from entering into this barbarian scheme. Mr. Lowe deserves the thanks of the colony for taking it up in the way he did.

YASS.

MR. BOYD's blacks passed through Yass a couple of days ago; they are not a bit better looking race than our own savages. I tried to talk with them, but could get nothing out of them, but that they were going to see the Governor and "Missa" Boyd. I hope they won't eat them both; but if I were, in equally good condition with "Missa" Boyd, I should not have been upon quite such friendly terms with his sable shepherds, as I was during their short sojourn in the township. It is a good joke that, whilst Mr. Boyd is sending a second importation to Twofold Bay, the first lot are are on their road from the "Wool-shed" to Sydney, for the purpose of having an interview with their—I suppose I must say—owner. Seriously speaking, every one is of opinion that the Legislature ought to interfere, and perhaps the arrival in Sydney of those who passed through this place the other day, may have the desired effect.

ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE.

IMPORTANT DISCOVERY.

To the Editors of the Sydney Morning Herald.

GENTLEMEN,—Permit me through the medium of your valuable journal to offer to the Government and the public a statement of a line of road which (after great perseverance and privation) I have discovered between the beautiful and fertile district of Illawarra and Appin,—now that by this line we avoid that frightful chasm called Jordan's Creek. This line commences at the foot of Mount Keera, and along the old track to within about six miles of the Stringy-bark House, from whence I turn to the right on my new line, and making Appin in the unprecedented distance of twenty-one miles from the junction of the roads leading to Wollongong and Dapto,—and insuring a level road, free of broken creeks or rocks. What may be called rivers or creeks—on this line they are quite level, and the expense of small bridges is a mere trifle,—and only two of them. They are two small tributaries which form Jordan's Creek—it is evident they must be very trifling. It is necessary to state that I avoid one very large creek, which has baffled several in their attempts to make this route, and which very narrow point of land I fell upon after days' research. Certainly I had a decided advantage, having for some time been residing near where the roads must ultimately pass. Now it will be a question, I am sure of easy solution, whether a whole new line, commencing within about six miles of Wollongong, to be carried through the mountain, which is more precipitous than that of Mount Keera, besides the vast advantage of having about eleven miles out of the twenty-one (with some good repairs) already made; or whether, for the advantage of a few about the town of Wollongong, will a new road, passing (query?) over Westmacott's, compete with mine—which will be proved beyond question that heavy-laden drays, four-wheeled carriages, gigs, &c., will come to and fro, with as much comfort as from Appin to Campbelltown. I should not have sent this assertion before the public, knowing that Mr. Rixon has commenced marking a line, starting from near Wollongong—only that I can prove to the satisfaction of any impartial judges, that besides my line being the shortest and levelest, a saving of £200 in the completion of the two lines must be effected. I only want fair play and no favour. I only wish to stand or fall by my merits or demerits in this act. If I stand, I shall only leave the matter in the hands of the Government and the public, trusting that such compensation may be awarded me as the nature of the enterprise may deserve,—and fully expecting to stand foremost on the list of those who may apply for the making and repairing the line in question, by giving good security.

I am, Gentlemen,

Your very obedient servant,

THOMAS M'EVOY.

Appin, October 20.

PILOT AND HARBOUR SERVICES.

REPORT of the Committee of the Legislative Council of South Australia, appointed by his Excellency on the 24th August, to take evidence and report upon the Pilot and Harbour Services at Port Adelaide.

The Committee proceeded to enquire into the matter entrusted to them, and after examining several of the principal merchants and shipowners, and others, interested in the trade of Port Adelaide, have arrived at the following conclusions, which they beg respectfully to lay before the Council:—

The enquiry, in the course of investigation, branched off into two distinct subjects.

Firstly—The mode in which the pilot service is at present conducted.

Secondly—The desertion of merchant seamen from vessels in the port.

With respect to the first, the Committee, having referred to a former report of a Committee of Council, appointed on the 26th August, 1844, to investigate the same subject, and having carefully considered the evidence given before them on this occasion, are of opinion that the state of trade at Port Adelaide, would not at present justify any great change in the mode of conducting the pilot service. The committee, however, would state their opinion that an almost unanimous feeling prevails amongst those interested, that the pilot service should be paid according to the work they perform; and they would further add that, all circumstances considered, they are of opinion the time is near at hand when the throwing open the pilotage to private competition will be both practicable and advantageous to the public.

They find that any immediate change in the system would increase the expenses of the harbour department in two particulars, namely, the care and repair of buoys, beacons, and moorings, and the landing of the mails (both which services are at present performed by the pilot establishment without extra cost), and moreover, that a higher rate of pilotage would probably be necessary to insure proper remuneration to pilots.

With respect to the desertion of seamen, the committee have the honour to inform the Council that this evil appears to prevail to a considerable extent, so much so as to form a serious grievance to ship-owners trading to this port.

The causes appear to be chiefly the high rate of wages to be obtained in the inter-colonial trade and on shore.

The remedy, although many suggestions have been made (as will be seen in reference to the evidence), this committee is not prepared to advance; but they would, nevertheless, recommend the subject as being one requiring the anxious consideration of the government.

In conclusion, the committee beg to express their favourable opinion as to the general efficient working of the harbour department. The few cases of complaint cited before them being of a nature inseparable from the present condition and system of the pilot service, and perhaps from any other; for they cannot refrain from remarking that not one serious accident has occurred to shipping under the present system to injure the character of the harbour as a resort for safety, or to impugn the skill and caution of the harbour authorities.

MELBOURNE CRIMINAL COURT.

(From the Melbourne Argus.)

MONDAY, OCTOBER 18.

BEFORE MR. JUSTICE A'BECKETT.

MANSLAUGHTER.

John Howard, convicted of causing the death of Julia Smallman, by supplying a quantity of the essential oil of bitter almonds in lieu of sweet almonds, appeared much affected at his position, and urged nothing in mitigation of the sentence.

Mr. Croke said that he did not consider the accused (Howard) so much to blame as his employer for taking into his establishment, for the purpose of dispensing medicines, a young man brought originally into the employment of Dr. Thomas in the capacity of groom. He therefore begged that a light punishment might be passed upon the prisoner. He recollected that when the prisoner first arrived in this colony he brought letters of introduction to him, (Mr. Croke) and he could answer for it that a person of better character never came to the colony.

His Honor said he fully coincided with Mr. Croke's remarks, and

Mr. Barry having made a few observations on behalf of the prisoner, His Honor requested Mr. Barry to hand him his brief, which would, he thought, have the effect of accomplishing all that that gentleman had in view.

His Honor, in passing sentence, said that a great deal of excitement existed as to the issue of this case; the sentence which he was about to pass would be influenced solely by the evidence which had been adduced, and the testimony which he had received in the prisoner's favour. However much he might regret the circumstance—and however much the public may be desirous of guarding against similar unfortunate occurrences, he should not feel justified in passing any sentence incompatible with the evidence both for and against the prisoner. In summary punishments, as they were termed, having for their intended effect the prevention of similar offences, the prisoner hears the voice of justice, but feels the hand of vengeance. He could not but think it strange that when the bottle containing the poison was taken back to the prisoner he did not then discover the mistake which he had committed—the medical gentlemen who had given evidence on the case having represented the smell as an infallible test; however, it must be borne in mind that at this time the mischief had been done—the unfortunate woman had taken the fatal mixture, and even had the prisoner at the time discovered the error he had committed, was then beyond the reach of human aid. On the other hand, it had been shown that the bottle from which the poison was taken was not properly marked—that is, the two letters SS, denoting "essential oil"—were omitted, and the prisoner, under the conviction that the bottle contained fixed oil, supplied unfortunately what proved to be essential oil of bitter almonds, or, in other words, prussic acid. It was to be regretted that on this occasion the prisoner had not exercised a little of that over caution, for which Dr. Thomas had stated that whilst in his service he was remarkable; but taking into consideration all the circumstances of the case—the anxiety which the prisoner had suffered—the incarceration to which he had been subjected—and degradation which he must have felt at being placed in that dock, he was of opinion that the majesty of the law would be sufficiently vindicated by payment of a fine of forty shillings to the Queen. The sentence of the Court, therefore, was that the prisoner pay a fine of 40s. to the Queen, and be imprisoned till such fine be paid.

MURDER.

John Healey, who had been convicted of the wilful murder of James Ritchie, at Tarraville, Gipps Land, was then placed in the dock, and upon being asked it he had anything to say why the sentence of the court should not be passed upon him, replied in a firm voice—"All as I've got to say is, that I'm innocent of the charge, and what I said was, that I was willing to die because I was innocent."

Perfect silence having been obtained,

His Honor proceeded to pass the following sentence:—"John Healey, after a trial of nearly two days' duration, a watchful and most unprejudiced jury have found you guilty of the wilful murder of James Ritchie, in that verdict I entirely concur. However cautious I may have been in summing up to the jury, I will now say that I entirely accord with them—that the bloody spectacle of James Ritchie was caused by your hands, your own words place beyond a doubt. What motive prompted you to the commission of the bloody deed is not so clear: it might have been revenge, but it appears to me that money was the chief temptation. According to your own statement at Tarraville, you were possessed of twenty-four pounds, but you refused to produce it or to state where it was to be found. This circumstance did not strike me at your trial, but when I reflect that this sum is similar to that of which the murdered man is known to have been possessed, it forms a very strong suspicion against you. Had this presumption stood alone you would in all probability have escaped, not from an absence of moral guilt, but from want of evidence; in a moment of remorse, however, you made a confession, which, taken in connection with the other evidence against you, places your guilt beyond the slightest doubt; true, you subsequently made a statement implicating two other persons, in which, although you deny any actual participation in the murder, you admit that if you had not been drunk you would in all probability have been present. That you were under the influence of liquor at the time the deed was committed is not improbable, it is indeed in evidence that whilst under the effects of liquor you laid down, that you got up, and when next you went to bed again you were a murderer. When by a harlot's side you sought repose, you found it not; your rest was disturbed, not with drink, as you stated, but with guilt; you flew again to the cursed rum bottle, but still the bloody corpse of your victim haunted you, and you slept not. It remains yet to be proved if you are the sole perpetrator of the deed; if you are, it behoves you to prevent the possibility of imputations resting upon innocent parties; there was certainly no evidence against the two men who were arraigned with you, and it appears to me that if they had not for some time prior to this event been in a beastly state of intoxication, which prevented them from giving a proper account of themselves, they would never have been suspected. I am told they bear a good character, but am utterly at a loss to reconcile a good character with an indulgence in a course of life which must inevitably lead to misery here and hell hereafter. For three consecutive days prior to the commission of the murder, you had been indulging in the lowest debauchery, drinking and gambling by day, and sharing amongst you such strumpets as the place afforded by night; one even appears to have been an object of jealousy as well as lust; no wonder that your mind and passions were inflamed to a degree which drove you to commit murder, and such will be the fate of your companions unless they forsake their evil courses. Scripture proclaims that neither fornicators, nor adulterers, nor drunkards, shall enter into the kingdom of Heaven. Too many, from whence you come, appear to view lightly the offences so fearfully denounced by Scripture, and hence Tarraville bids fair to become the nursery of more crime than ever emanated from Parkhurst or Pentonville. You will never more return to the scene of your former crime; before another criminal is tried at that bar, the grave will have closed over you. A sentence so awful I would not pass if I intended to interpose one word to stay the executioner. If, among the rumours which may reach you, it should be stated that your Judge too much disapproves of capital punishment to carry the sentence passed upon you into effect, I pray you disregard it. No other motive than a sincere belief of your innocence would induce me to interpose one word in your behalf, and I must tell you that I neither believe you to be innocent, nor want satisfactory proofs of your guilt. Prepare, then, to meet your offended Maker; but a few days, a very few days, and in the nakedness of unfleshed spirit, you will stand before your God. Endeavour, I implore you, to wipe off the stains, the dreadful stains, upon your soul. Your spiritual adviser will exhort and encourage you in putting forth prayers and petitions to your Maker, and even at the eleventh hour, who shall say that these shall not avail? The sentence of the Court is, that you be taken back to the place whence you came, and from thence to the place of execution, on such day as His Excellency the Governor may appoint, there to be hanged by the neck till you are dead, and may the Lord have mercy on your guilty soul.

THE MURDER OF MR. MANN.

[We published on Monday an account of the murder of Mr. Mann, in Van Diemen's Land. The following statements were made by one of the murderers. Both Leviston and Whelan were convicts.]

First Statement of Michael Whelan.

On the night of the 7th instant I was at home. I asked where was the sugar from Liviston. He told me there was no sugar. I then eat some bread at the fire. I went up stairs to let him down, so he came down then. I heard the other boy asleep; then I came down to get my supper. He then told me to come down with him, I told him there was no use for me to go down with him. He said for me to go down with him; I said what is the use of me to go down. Come down for fear I might want you. So then I said you ought to be able for one with a axe. He said for me to come down any way; so I said I would come any way. I eat my supper any way; then we come out; there were two axes at the fence; then he took up one of them—the oldest axe with the long handle. Us two comes down, We were talking. He said to me, you can have the mistress soon any way—I can have Isabella and half the ground. If that won't do you, I will give you money to take you away. We came down to the gate, and he unhasped it; when the master comes he will shut the gate, and when he's so doing I will then hit him when his back is to me the way he won't know me. So then he wanted me to stand with him; I said I won't, and then went a few rods from him. He said, mind and be out I can I want you. So I said never fear. He came to me when he heard the master coming and asked me if I was asleep. Mind now and be up. I stood up from where I was. He went down to his own place. When the master come inside he let him come up to where I was. He then made a blow, and Mann said what do you want. He knocked him down with the axe, and struck him three or four times. To the best of my knowledge he dragged him then to where he was found. I then said is he killed Harry? O never fear, he is as dead as he can be. So he told me to go across the sand hill, and I will go the other way home. I never saw him after till I saw him at home. That was about ten o'clock. We then went to bed. He called with a couple a times to see if he was awake;—he made no answer—they were speaking no more that night. Yesterday morning he told me to to hold fast. I said never fear. He told me to go asleep, but look after the horses. He also told me not to say I was out on that night. William Jones was by at the time he spoke the words to me, or else there will be a pulling match if you do.

Second Statement of Michael Whelan.

In September last Mrs. Mann fell out with Mr. Mann, on account of his horses going into Ellis's paddock, so she came out, after having a great scold, and sat down at the fire. She whispered across to me and told me she would give me ten pounds if I would help to kill the master. I said, I don't know who I could get to help me. No matter, says she, there is enough to do it with you. So she stood up, and William Jones came in. She said she would go to the public house and tell every one about the horses; how he was making his men drive his horses into Ellis's green stuff. So I went down, and heard nothing further until Mr. Mann received a lawyer's letter. The next day Henry Leviston came to me and asked me to join him in a job that I knew. I made answer and askad him if it was about the master. He said it was. I said it was a serious job, and asked him did any one else know about it? He said not one alive. Then he went to his work. About half an hour after that Mrs. Mann came to me and asked me would I stand to what I said last night. I made answer, and said, there is no minding a woman in a passion. She said to me, am I in a passion now? I said, not a bit. Now she said, I abominably hate the sight of him, and my word is good—I will pay you what I told you. Then she told me what money Mr. Mann owed: she said there was £200 owed on the farm; Mr. Mann was paying eight per cent. for it, and was going to pay £16 a-year for the use of it; and that the half year's rent was due. So things dropped for a few days, and Leviston and I was still talking about it. Leviston told me he would have me at my liberty in a few days; and said, I will give you £2 when the master is buried; or otherwise stop till the harvest, and I will give you £4. So then, on Tuesday, the 5th October, Mrs. Mann came to me in the garden where I was working, and told me she had found out a man that Mr. Mann owed £20; his name is Walton. Mrs. Mann said to me, I think this is the best night you can get to kill him. Then I said to her, I never knew a man do the like but he had the woman and all she possessed. She said to me, are you a married man? I told her I was. She said I could not marry her, but told me she would give me money to send me away. She then told me she would get Leviston to harness the horse, and herself and Harry would put me a day's journey. She then went in, and I followed in about fifteen minutes after, and put a coal on my pipe. While I was in the house she sent the two children out to the bullock cart to see was the chains in it. She and I went to bed together; after being in bed some time we came down stairs; I went out to my work; that was about eleven o'clock in the forenoon of the 5th of October; in about half an hour's time she followed me out to the garden, where I was working; she told me I could have herself when I liked if I done my business well. So then she went through the garden from me. I saw nothing more of her until I went to my dinner. Liviston came to his dinner also. When he eat his dinner he came out to me to where I was working; that was the garden. He told me this was the night—if Mr. Mann was out late to kill him. Very well, said I. Liviston said to me I think the three-grained fork is the best to kill him with. I told him to get the handiest thing he chosed, so he went up and brought the fork from the fowl-house, and left it with me, and told me to hide it before the boys would come from school. Liviston then went to his work; I worked until about three o'clock, and went to the house to lite my pipe. I did not see Mrs. Mann in the kitchen. I went to work about four o'clock. She came into the garden where I was working. She told me she intended to give me one of Mann's new shirts and his coat, so I said that was good. She then left me. At night when Liviston came home we both went in the yard. Liviston told me the best way to go down where the fork was, and bring it with me down to the lane, and stop there, and he would go to work with my boots. Then Jones would go to bed I would leave the house. He paused for a few moments, and said, you had better have supper before you go out. So then I took supper and went out, and Liviston followed me, and told me when Jones would go to sleep he would come down the lane to where I was. I went on then and took the three-grained fork with me and stopped in the lane. I judged it was then ten o'clock. I then got vexed with myself, and would pitch it to the devil, and decline having anything to do with it. I then left the place I was in, and came about a rod; when I looked behind me I heard a noise; it was Mr. Mann coming up the lane drunk; I had not power to leave the spot; I sat down in the fern to hide. Mr. Mann passed within a yard of me, and did not see me. I then let him go about 15 perches before me I then got up and raised the ferns I had been lying on. I then followed him home into the yard. He stood against the house, listening to what they were saying inside, as I then judged. I then left the fork by the cow-house; I then stopped for a moment. Mr. Mann went in then, and I went into my own place. He came from his house into the kitchen, and Liviston was making me a pair of boots, and Jones was present. Mr. Mann told Liviston he would give him a shilling of his wages. He then went into his own house. The three of us went to the fire and sat down. I told Liviston I would have sixpence out of the shilling, provided he got it. We then went to bed. In the morning, when we got up, Liviston told me he could not come to me as Jones did not go to bed; so I told Liviston I had pitched the concern to the devil, and would have nothing to do with it. Liviston said, don't give it up, as there is plenty of chances yet. On that morning, Mr. and Mrs. Mann had a falling out. After breakfast Mrs. Mann come out; she asked me was my father and mother Irish? I said yes. I think not, said she, or else you would have blood in you. What is the reason you let him up last night? I said I will never do it by myself. She said myself was as good as twenty, and he so drunk. I then asked does Liviston know anything about it? She said not; she could not depend on him; if the girls see me here they will take notice of me. She then went into the house. Liviston came to work to me to plant potatoes; he and me were talking about the job. Liviston said, the first opportunity we get we will kill him. It was drawing near night. The master called in Liviston to shave. When he done so, he came to me and said, he believed the master was going to town next morning. I went to my work as usual, and Liviston went to stock-keeping. Then about ten o'clock Mrs. Mann came to me and said, guess what I am going to do to-day. I don't know mam said I. I am going to wash the sheets to wake him in well. Mam, said I, you are after killing me; I took a trembling. She then asked what ailed me. I said it was worth your while to feel my wrist. She then took a hold of my wrist, and said, I think you are a cowardly fellow. I would rather you had kept that to yourself mam. She then told me she would not have said so, only she thought it would make me ten times more wicked, that is to let you see I am so determined. I took another notion in a moment, and said if you get me five pounds against evening I will forgive you the rest. Well, said she, I has it not myself, nor do I know where to get it. Mr. Davis in town owes me five pounds for the keep of a horse, and I am to receive it, and when the master is buried I will sell you the horse and dray and pay you the five pounds; it is sure to you; Agnes is in the front door so I must bolt. My determination was to bolt, if she gave me the five pounds, to Port Phillip if I could. That rested until night; so then at night Liviston told me to go on as I did on Tuesday night. I said I would not stand the cold as I did on the last night. He said go over to T. Y. Lowes's farm and stop there for a couple of hours. I then took another notion and went to Jonathan Edwards's; I stopt there a couple of hours until I thought it was time for me to go. I then lit my pipe, and Jonathan's wife told me not to tell any one where I was, so I bid them good night and went home. So when I got home Agnes Mann came and asked me who was that. She received no answer from us. In a few moments after, she asked Liviston had Mick come home. Liviston said yes. Which way did he come? Leviston said he did not know.—Mrs. Mann told me that her daughter Agnes told her every word as plain as if she knew all about it. Mrs. Mann replied, and said I wish he may never come home alive. Agnes said, he will live long enough to torment us all; we would live happy and comfortable without him. Then I asked Mrs. Mann did Agnes know anything about it. Oh no, said she. I said if she did it should not be done.

The above statement was this morning read to Whelan in my presence, when he declared that, between him and his God, the contents true, and that it was voluntarily made.

JOSEPH MORGAN, Chief Constable.
¼ past 10, 12th Oct., 1847.

The jury, after deliberating four hours, returned a verdict of wilful murder against Henry Leviston, shoemaker, for that he did, on the night of Thursday, the 7th October instant, with a certain weapon called an axe, value one shilling, held in both his hands, inflict two mortal wounds on the head of Robert Mann, of which wound he then and there instantly died; and that Michael Whelan was present, comforting, abetting, aiding, and assisting the said Henry Liviston the said felony and murder to do and commit.

RAILWAY.—A meeting was held yesterday at the South Australian Company's Offices, to consider the propriety of urging forward the promotion of a Railway from the northern mines to the Port. A large number of leading colonists attended, and William Giles, Esq., J.P., Manager of the Company, was called to the chair. It was determined to memorialize His Excellency for the immediate bringing before Council of the standing orders on the subject agreed to some time ago by the sub-committee. The idea is, that one-tenth of the necessary amount might be raised here, where it is considered the movement must commence, and a deposit of ten per cent. on this placed in the hands of the Local Government, will be a sufficient guarantee to justify the sending home of the proposals, and the calling upon the friends of the colony in England to subscribe for the remaining nine-tenths. The desertion of seamen from their ships was casually mentioned, and the Chairman was requested to urge on the Governor, (at the time of presenting the memorial) the absolute necessity of some stringent measures being taken on this subject.—South Australian.

ARRIVAL OF STOCK OVERLAND.—We are happy to announce the safe arrival overland from Sydney of Mr. B. Raye, and party, with two thousand head of cattle in first-rate condition for the butcher. Mr. Raye and party, left the last inhabited station on the Darling on the 2nd of June, making a most successful expedition. They fell in with numerous tribes of natives, but met with no molestation. A large portion of the stock has been already disposed of at good prices, while the horse-stock has been sold equally well, and offers have been made for the remainder at prices highly satisfactory. As this party have found so good a market here, others will, no doubt, speedily follow in the same route. The expedition consists of five teams and twenty men.—South Australian Register, September 25.

OBITUARY.—We deeply regret having today the painful duty of announcing the death on Sunday last of Mr. Goodsir, of the Customs Department, after a very brief and painful illness. Mr. Goodsir was an old and faithful servant of the Government, having been attached to the Customs' Department of the colony for upwards of twenty years, during the greater portion of which period he was stationed at Botany Bay in the vicinity of Sydney. About six years ago he was appointed by the Board of Customs in England to the office of First Landing Waiter and Tide Surveyor of the port of Melbourne, since which period he has been stationed at Williams Town. Mr. Goodsir had during his long residence in the colony endeared himself to a wide circle of friends, and his extreme urbanity in the discharge of his official duties had won for him the esteem of the whole of the commanders of the shipping visiting the port. He has left a widow and a fine family of young children to deplore their loss.—Melbourne Argus.

CURE FOR THE PREVALENT INFLUENZA.—Simultaneously with the breaking up of the late frost a severe influenza attacked the inhabitants of the metropolis and its environs; and although it is not so violent in its nature at present as the like epidemic of 1834 was, so general is it, that scarce a house can be found without some of the inmates being affected; and as there are many persons who are unable to procure medical assistance, we recommend, from good authority (that of an eminent surgeon in extensive practice), the following, as a safe and efficacious remedy for the cure of so distressing a malady:—One table spoonful of sweet spirit of nitre and two teaspoonsful of paragoric elixir, mixed together, and taken in a wine-glassful of hot sugar-and-water on going to bed, for two or three successive nights; also, a quarter of an ounce of Epsom salts dissolved in a cupful of warm water, and taken on each following morning, the patient being at the same time particular in keeping the feet warm and dry, and living on a light diet. A proportionate dose of the same medicine is equally beneficial for children.—Globe.

GRANMORE.

Lives there a man so lost to nature's charms,
That would not shun, when scenes like these invite,
The crowded city—and with joyous steps
Through fair Balmania trace his devious way?
There rosy health dwells in the mountain breeze,
And plenty in the vale.

"There are few parts of New South Wales which afford such scope for picturesque illustration as the Harbour of Port Jackson. Its natural scenery is of the highest order of sublimity and magnificence, combined with every delightful and romantic variation that can either charm the eye or interest the imagination."—Sydney Herald, 11th August, 1840.

MR. STUBBS has received instructions to sell by auction, at his Mart, King-street,
This Day, 27th October,
At 12 o'clock, (without reserve),

That pretty little suburban Residence known as Elgin Cottage, situated at Balmain, within a few yards of the Steam Ferry and Ferry Boat landing wharves. It is most substantially built with cut stone, with a pretty verandah, and surrounded with a garden. It contains four apartments, and an attic used as a store-room. There is a well of water on the premises that may safely be said is the best in the county of Cumberland. The ground has a frontage to the main street of 54 feet, and a frontage to the road leading to the ferry of 140 feet, and also a frontage to a reserved lane in the rear. The view from the verandah is, without any exaggeration, the most delightful imaginable, having Sydney, Woolloomooloo, Surry Hills, Redfern, &c., &c., breaking out betwixt the two head-lands of Balmain and Pyrmont, and the beautiful villas on the Glebe, with the extensive sheet of water of Johnson's Bay, and its innumerable inlets, spread out in magnificent splendour. In short, as to view, it is every thing the mind can conceive or the heart desire, and in other respects forms a most desirable residence for a respectable couple.

Intending purchasers are requested to view the premises.

ALSO,

Four (4) Allotments of the Granmore Estate, contiguous to the above and adjoining the Ferry Jetty, and having a frontage to the Harbour of twenty-five feet each, or 100 feet.

Wednesday, 3rd November.
EXCELLENT MERCANTILE PREMISES AND STORES,
No. 650, Lower George-street,
Occupied by Mr. J. Johnson and Mr. J. C. Korff,
BETWEEN THE AUSTRALIAN HOTEL AND MR. J. S. HANSON'S PREMISES, NEAR THE QUEEN'S WHARF,
TO BE SOLD BY AUCTION
BY MR. LYONS,
On Wednesday, 3rd November,
At his Mart, at eleven o'clock precisely.

THIS DESIRABLE PROPERTY occupies 42 perches of Land, being upwards of A QUARTER OF AN ACRE, and has a frontage of 64 feet to LOWER GEORGE-STREET,
by an average depth of 194 feet.

It extends nearly to the Circular Wharf in its present state, which, when carried out to its full extent, will pass between this property and Sydney Cove. The occupants of these premises will then have the convenience of entrance to that wharf—a most important advantage to any one in business connected with shipping—and when the cut through Argyle-street is completed, this part of George-street will have easy communication with the various wharfs in Darling Harbour.

It is therefore evident this is just the spot for a Ship Chandler, Sail-maker, Ship's-smith, Cooper, or any one interested in maritime affairs.

THE HOUSE

Has a terrace in front, with a gateway entrance from George-street, adjoining the 'Australian Hotel,' it has convenient cellars on the basement, and contains on the ground floor an entrance hall, and two good-sized rooms, used as offices by Mr. Johnson and Mr. Korff. There is a separate entrance from George-street to the part formerly occupied by the late Mr. Hopkins, which contains four spacious stores, on the Ground Floor, of a very considerable depth, with excellent stores under them, suitable for wines, spirits, tallow, or any other goods requiring cool cellarage. The entrance to the lower store is from the yard.

The rooms on the first floor are six in number, with a loft over them.

The yard is of immense depth; it contains coopers' sheds, a three-stall stable, and well of water, &c.

At the lower end of the yard there is
A NEWLY-ERECTED SUBSTANTIAL STONE-BUILT STORE, of three floors, affording space for the stowage of about six hundred tons of goods. This was built by the late Mr. Hopkins, at an outlay of nearly £2000.

Between this store and the Circular Wharf, and adjoining "Kellie's," or the Liverpool Wharf, is
MR. KORFF'S COAL WHARF,
from which there will be the convenience of entrance to the Circular Wharf, as soon as it is completed in that direction, and it is now open to the water.

Mr. LYONS strongly recommends the above to the notice of parties having money ready to invest in the purchase of first-rate City Property. The excellent position for business will ever ensure these premises first-class tenants. It is an improving part of the metropolis, and really forms altogether one of the most complete and valuable properties which the Auctioneer has been favoured with instructions to sell for some time past.
